

The New Standard for Education – ISO 29990

As one of the first certification authorities Cert-IT certifies educational institutions and service providers according to the new standard. DIN ISO 29990 is the first standard to describe basic requirements of educational institutions – ranging from individual trainer to university. It is quality management system and service standard at the same time which focuses on the learning process. Already from 1.1.2011 Cert-IT offers the certification according the new standard. .

Cert-IT GmbH, founded by the Social Partners of the IT industries, the German Association for Information Technology, Telecommunication and New Media, the Central Association of Electric Engineering and Electric Industries, the Metal Workers' Union, the Unified Service Industries Union, the German Society for Computer Sciences, and the Fraunhofer-Society.

The new standard offers the following benefits:

For service providers

- International recognition
- Clearly defined and documented processes and process optimisation

For learners

- Transparency and comparability of training and qualification
- Evaluation criterion for learning opportunities

For public authorities that award contracts

- Defined, consistent requirements
- Comparability
- Legal conformity
